
Fully trained quarter horses

Posted by shaza - 2008/07/04 13:01

Where are they?

Seems in this country we are lacking fully trained quarter horses for sale.

=====

Re:Fully trained quarter horses

Posted by tansi - 2008/07/04 14:07

They are about, people just don't want to pay the worth of a fully trained quarter horse. However, you can pick up a bargain, just have to search around.

On another point, can anyone tell me if they have actually sold a horse via the western shop, or do just loads of people look!!!!!!

=====

Re:Fully trained quarter horses

Posted by rosie - 2008/07/04 15:16

:P too true! i advertised my daughter's horse on both here and english sites and it still took 2 years to sell him. admittedly, we were a bit fussy about who to sell him to, but it all worked out in the end. i think its good to advertise and to speak to people at shows, esp. trainers, as they know who's got what for sale.

rosie

=====

Re:Fully trained quarter horses

Posted by jemmadavies88 - 2008/07/04 15:26

Hi

What i find is that people dont tend to part with a good fully trained quarter horse in uk as they are hard to come by, but occasionally if some one is moving abroad etc one comes up but they are like gold dust. I couldnt find one to suit me so ended up buying 3year old which is usually a big no no for a beginner but i have kept him with a trainer and that has really worked for me. even though the expense is alot to keep him in training after everything it probably works out closely to buying a trained older horse and ive enjoyed learning with him.

=====

Re:Fully trained quarter horses

Posted by shaza - 2008/07/04 17:46

I too have a youngster in training but im looking for a trained horse to get me in the show ring,so im then ready for my youngster when she ready.My nerves are awful as is my riding.

I think ive found one "fair little playgirl" i have her on a trial period to see if i can cope with the riding on my back,also to see how she goes with forest flies and pigs.

=====

Re:Fully trained quarter horses

Posted by Katie - 2008/07/04 19:47

Hi

After 6 months of looking and the third horse I saw. I bought my QH Blue, fully trained, from The Mendip after seeing him advertised on here first. Bargin price considering what he has done and I haven't found anything yet to spoke him.

Im very new to western but the horses and definitely out there.

X

=====

Re:Fully trained quarter horses

Posted by shaza - 2008/07/04 20:33

It sure is hard to find the right horse,more so as im will only look at mares.
Hopefully this horse will be the right one,but in general there a only the odd few out there.
Also found some of these trained horses have there issues or problems.
Ring sour being one of them.
Or ive found horses that are only arena ridden,poor things what life is that.

=====

Re:Fully trained quarter horses

Posted by hunterrookie - 2008/07/07 08:08

Shaza you should have a lot of fun with Playgirl, I remember her from when Chrissie Mayhew had her and she's adorable.

Think there's always an element of compromise. We wanted a 3-6yo that had all the basics but we could still train further and we found near perfection (tho the trainer might disagree when our mare is having one of her 'woman' days:laugh:)
The only thing that stops her being absolutely perfect is that she's grey and loves rolling in poo:unsure:

=====

Re:Fully trained quarter horses

Posted by shaza - 2008/07/07 08:26

She is a real nice horse i liked her over a year ago but missed out on her then.
Sadly though she going back

=====