
Rieky Young Clinic

Posted by billywhiz - 2007/11/13 12:10

We are tentatively looking at arranging a clinic during springtime next year, it would be in the South Midlands area, the cost would be approx £200 for two days. We need to know if there is enough interest so that this can be organised.

Please PM if you need to know any further information.

=====

Re:Rieky Young Clinic

Posted by VixBQH - 2007/11/13 14:09

Yes I would be interested, where do we find out more?

=====

Re:Rieky Young Clinic

Posted by REINMAN - 2007/11/13 14:46

Encouraging more top level trainers/riders to come to the UK to run clinics is very much in line with what the sport in the UK needs and should be encouraged wherever possible. I could possibly be interested...but who is 'we'??

regards. RM

=====

Re:Rieky Young Clinic

Posted by billywhiz - 2007/11/13 18:15

Rieky and myself, a very small we.

to expand a little. The objective is to get Rieky over to the UK, this is completely independent of any association and is aimed at giving the UK access to European trainers. The price quoted is estimated as a cost to cover trainer fees and expenses. There is no intention to make any profit on this clinic and if there is a surplus then this could either be rebated or pooled for as prize money in an end of clinic fun class. Open to suggestions?

Post edited by: billywhiz, at: 2007/11/13 18:28

=====

Re:Rieky Young Clinic

Posted by savvysaz - 2007/11/13 22:05

I'd be a definite yes to both days!:)

=====

Re:Rieky Young Clinic

Posted by rosie - 2007/11/14 13:00

:laugh: good luck with the clinic, great to have euros over and i hope lots of people go. unfortunately, our youngster is too young at the moment, but in a couple of years...

rosie

=====

Re:Rieky Young Clinic

Posted by zenithhorses - 2007/11/14 22:42

I think my son would be intersted if it was aimed at riders new to reining (although I'm sure he will have had lessons by then).

=====